INFORMATION SOURCES ON INTERNATIONAL AGRICULTURAL TRADE

The Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS) is an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture that represents U.S. agricultural interests overseas, reports on international agricultural production and trade, promotes exports of U.S. farm products, fosters economic development and trade linkages, and works to improve world trading conditions. FAS also coordinates USDA's input into activities of international organizations, including USDA's role in international food aid programs, and administers some agricultural import regulations.

The following is a list of topics related to international agriculture and trade and the experts, inside and outside FAS, who can provide information on them. For recommendations regarding changes, additions, and/or deletions, please send comments by e-mail to protzman@fas.usda.gov.

This information is available through the Internet. Connect directly to the site at http://www.fas.usda.gov/scripts/fassubj/fassubj_frm.idc or through the search option on the FAS homepage at <http://www.fas.usda.gov>.
